QUIZ PROGRAM PLEASES LARGE AUDIENCE

An enjoyable quiz program was put on in Keltie's hall by the Irma Social Credit Group last Tuesday evening. A team from the senior public school grades entered a geography quiz against a team from the high school. This was a fairly close contest with the high school winning, Miss Cecile Shaw holding the floor the longest. Miss Olive Jack was the last one of the public school team to take her seat.

Following this, captains were selected from among the audience to choose a men's and a ladies' team for a general quiz. Those on the teams were Mrs. B. Long, Mrs. Cooper, Mrs. Sather, Miss C. Shaw, Mrs. E. W. Carter and Miss Marjorie Webber; and Messrs. V. Hutchinson, Marvin Reitan, C. E. Fenlon, S. Stead, A. K. Peterson and E. W. Carter. The ladies won this contest, Mrs. Sather and Miss Shaw still being on their feet when the last one of the opposing team had to take his seat.

Other items on the program were musical numbers by Sam Stead, Deloraine Stockton and Betty McLean, tap dancing by a class of public school boys and girls, and step dancing by Billie Milton.

The program closed with the national anthem, after which a delicious lunch was served. Dancing was then enjoyed for a while before leaving for home.

V.V. WORKERS ACTIVE IN PAST YEAR

The Victory Volunteer Workers south of Irma, thought it would be approved by all that we let everyone see what they have done in the way of helping the Irma branch of the Red Cross during the past six months. Twelve meetings were held, nine comforters were made, eight shirts and four pairs of marmalade. The meetings were held in the various neighbors' homes, the afternoon spent in quilting or piecing a top for the next quilt, all enjoying a very pleasant afternoon. The marmalade was made one afternoon by three members, from fruit given by members, and the sugar taken from the funds. These were acquired by chicken supper put on by the members, bringing in $14.40, also from a raffle of a cushion and clothespin bag, bringing $7.00. After each meeting a collection was taken, this brought in around $10.00.

Meetings were held every two

We are making a special appeal to the farmers' wives to look up any fat or dripping, used or otherwise, that can be spared for the special salvage appeal. It does not matter how old or new it is as long as it can be melted and stored in jam pails. So let's all get together and see if we can ship a case of a hundred pounds from Irma. I'm sure we can if we try. If the Red Cross room is not open, E. W. Carter or R. L. Zimmerman will gladly take care of it for you.

Another shipment of 6 large wool comforters, a good quantity of knitted goods and a box of clothing and supplies for refugees left the work room this week, so Irma is still carrying on in a very gratifying way. New and old knitters are joining the ranks right along, but there is always room for more assistance in the ranks of sewers and quilters. We have not had too many yet. Everyone is welcome. The soldiers are fighting for all of us. The civilians in England are holding the front lines, so there won't be a front line to hold in Canada. Do you feel you are really doing your part or are you waiting to be asked? Next year may be too late.

Wedding Bells

CRABB—MILTON

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the United church massed on January 3rd, when Rev. E. Longmire performed the ceremony in which Mary Davis Milton, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Milton, became the bride of Frank George Crabb.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a rose crepe dress with navy blue accessories and carried a bouquet of roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Jessie J. Milton. The bridegroom was attended by his brother, William H. Crabb.

Following the ceremony a wedding reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Crabb will make their home in the Irma district.

Best wishes are extended by their many friends.

V

SANDERS—MCNAUGHTON

St. Mary's Anglican church was the scene of a pretty wedding on New Year's day, when Wifred Sanders and Jessie Marion McNaughton were united in marriage. The groom was supported by his brother, Edwin Sanders; Mrs. Edwin Sanders acted as matron of honor; Mr. Wm. Doolton gave the bride away, and Rev. Wats performed the ceremony.

Both bride and matron were becomingly attired, the former in

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Editor, Irma Times:

Another year's endeavors for our local Red Cross organization have been brought to a close showing a wonderful measure of accomplishment and success. Those who are directly in touch with the work of our branch or have followed the Red Cross reports in our local paper will require no special reminder of this, and the fact that the work of our Irma branch has found such favorable mention in outside Canadian news speaks for itself.

A very great deal of the money and work for the year has been turned towards providing bedding and comforts for war victims in the bombed areas of the old land, these including quilts, heavy wool comforters, blankets and clothing, as well as many supplies for hospitals and large quantities of comforts for our soldiers, sailors and airmen, all of which has been reported from time to time.

As we look back upon these accomplishments of the past it is our desire to extend our appreciation and heartfelt thanks to all our Red Cross workers and friends for their splendid support throughout the year.

In facing the responsibility of the New Year, we cannot but feel that the need for all kinds of Red Cross supplies may be greatly intensified and trust that one and all will continue to give to this great ministry of compassion and service their whole-hearted sympathy and support.

Again on behalf of the Irma branch of the Canadian Red Cross we extend our sincerest appreciation and thanks.

E. LONGMIRE, President.

Collaboration between the three great powers leading the world struggle against Hitlerism was significantly advanced in a series of conversations between British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Soviet Premier Josef V. Stalin and his foreign commissar, Viacheslav M. Molotov, concluded in Moscow a few days ago.

Eden's visit to Russia, carried through under conditions of the greatest secrecy, was a spectacular though logical complement to the Atlantic Conference of President Roosevelt and Winston Churchill last August, the three-power meetings held in Moscow

Harold L. Weir last September and the more recent visit of Mr. Churchill to Washington and Ottawa.

There is every expectation that a similar exchange of views will take place ultimately between the Soviet Union and the United States. Behind it all is the Anglo-American hope that meetings like these will pave the way for ultimate agreement of views with the Soviet Union along the lines of the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting.

The principal results of the Eden-Stalin conversations were these:

1—Strengthening of military cooperation between Great Britain and the U.S.S.R.

2—Frank exchange of views on war aims with particular reference to the political and economic reshaping of Europe after the present war.

3—Complete clarification by Eden of Britain's war position.

No agreement was signed during the Moscow meetings. The Anglo-Soviet communiqué points out that the conversations, which occurred in a friendly atmosphere, showed the identity of both parties on all questions relating to the conduct of the war and especially with regard to the necessity for the utter defeat of Hitlerite Germany and the adoption thereafter of measures to render completely impossible any repetition of German aggression in future.

Like a boxer tensed to take and give hard body blows without quarter, the Panama Canal stands ready for whatever may come.

In sandbagged watch stations overlooking America's most vital waterway and in far-flung listening posts and emplacements hidden by the natural camouflage of the tropics, observers peer toward the horizon day and night. Patrol planes scour vast areas of the Pacific and Caribbean, enabling the canal zone's nightly precautionary blackout to be held off until evening.

Pilots and paratroops, coast artillerymen, submarines, bluejackets, infantrymen—everyone is ready and itching for action, reports say.

No one knows when, or if, the canal forces will see action but vigilance certainly will not relax regardless. The drone of scout planes gives one unceasing evidence of that fact.

But work on the new locks, on the transoceanic bridge, on the vast construction projects, goes on regardless of the ever-constant threat of attack. Skilled workmen from the States go down every week, some 500 of them, to fill the vacancies created by those unable to stand the tropics or to fill the demand made by the apparently unending expansion.

It is safe to say that the Panama zone will not be taken by surprise.

The immense material losses suffered by the Germans in their retreat from Moscow are attributable to the rapidity of the Russian pursuit and the ability of the Red Army to perform repeated outflanking manoeuvres against the retiring German columns despite the harsh conditions of the Russian winter.

An announcement in the official Eden-Stalin conversations were that:

Russian press puts the booty captured since Nov. 16 on the central front alone, at 2,113 tanks, 12,204 automobiles, 1,578 guns and thousands of trophies in other categories.

It is now obvious that the Russian counter-offensive was carefully prepared and organized for, when the tide of battle turned, Stalin and his generals had masses of fresh reserves ready to throw into the battle to maintain a steady and decimating pursuit.

The Germans relying almost entirely on mechanized transport, were obliged to cling to highways and roads; the heavy blanket of snow covering intervening fields and forests greatly restricted manoeuvrability.

This was a weakness which the resourceful Russian have exploited to the utmost. Besides their armored units, they have made considerable use of cavalry backed up by infantry and ski troops to make quick flank attacks against roads cluttered with German transport.

The reserves of Russian cavalry in the Moscow region were larger than anybody had suspected and it is doubtful whether, in any case, the Germans had taken them seriously. Since winter broke, these mounted divisions have displayed an effectiveness far beyond expectation.

They had no oil to freeze, no engines to break down, and they could be maneuvered through any kind of terrain and through the worst kind of weather conditions.

They have performed brilliant outflanking manoeuvres especially in the southern Moscow front where Russian horsemen have captured scores of villages.

The Germans are reaping the bitter fruits of over-confidence and miscalculation. They surely misjudged the fighting qualities and numbers of the Russian reserves. And—to harp again on an old theme—they surely miscalculated the Russian winter. Quite apart from the ratio of armored strength of the two sides, the fighting in the last few weeks has demonstrated that the Russians are better fighters man for man under the severe conditions of the Russian winter than their adversaries.

And there is no doubt that they are better equipped to meet these conditions.

The Hawaiian Islands

extension of the war to the Pacific Ocean, and the recent attack on Pearl Harbor have brought the Hawaiian Islands into new prominence. Known heretofore largely as a pleasure land, and as a land between this continent, the Orient and our sister Dominions of Australia and New Zealand, this group of islands lies twenty-two hundred miles south of San Francisco, and four thousand eight hundred and ninety miles from Hong Kong. Known formerly as the Sandwich Islands, they were annexed in 1898 by the United States, and are now known as the Territory of Hawaii. Described by Hendrik Von Loon in his famous "Geography," as "those islands in the Pacific where people neither toiled nor spun, but lived just the same." They were discovered in 1542 by Gaetano, a Spanish explorer. In 1770 they were visited by Captain Cook, who was murdered by the natives there, when he was on his way home from one of his voyages.

Annexed By United States

Geographically they form the extreme northeastern group of Polynesia, and extend in a chain from southeast to northwest for four hundred miles. The entire area of the island is six thousand, four hundred and fifty square miles, and eight of the twelve islands are inhabited. They were governed by a succession of native rulers until January 1893, when a republic was organized, under the presidency of Sanford B. Dole. In 1898 the islands, at the wish of their new government, were annexed by the United States. In 1900 they were created a territory with Mr. Dole as governor. With good reason they are known widely for their charms as a holiday retreat, and their mild climate, wide beaches and natural beauties make them one of the most pleasant of the world's playgrounds. We are told that the thermometer seldom falls below 50 degrees or rises above 90, and that in the lowlands the average temperature is 78 in July, and 70 in January. There are few hurricanes or thunderstorms and frost occurs only in the mountains, some of which are snow-capped throughout the year.

Volcanic Origin

The islands are of volcanic origin and were raised by eruptions from the sea. Coral reefs have added to their surface area and incidentally to the usefulness for defence purposes of many of their natural harbors. The climate and soil are suitable for the cultivation of a variety of plants. Sugar cane is produced in large quantities, and there is also a large import trade in pineapples and bananas, which are grown extensively. Several active volcanoes still exist in the mountains that ridge these islands. On the island of Hawaii, the largest of the group, the peaks of Mauna Kea and Mauna Loa rise to heights of nearly fourteen hundred feet, and Kilauea, situated on the side of Mauna Loa, is one of the most noted volcanoes of the world. The volcano on Maui, another island of the group, has the largest crater in the world. Honolulu, on the island of Oahu, is the largest city and is the capital of the territory. Pearl Harbor, situated a short distance north of Honolulu, has excellent natural port facilities, and its importance as a naval base has been emphasized in all disputes in the Pacific. The population of the islands includes Caucasians, Chinese, Japanese, native Hawaiians, and a large American colony. The Territory has a representative in the Congress of the United States, and is governed by an elected senate or house of representatives. The chief executive is a governor appointed by the President of the United States. For a time these pleasant peaceful islands must play their part in the struggle to defend the principles of freedom, but the mountains that now look down on ships of war, and whose tops resound to the whirr of the wings of military airplanes, will again some day see the pleasure boats of free countries come and go, and airplanes on missions of peace will again use it as a link between continents.

Three-Cent Bonus

For Grade "A" Eggs Purchased For Export To Britain

A bonus to producers of three cents a dozen on all grade A eggs purchased for export to Britain under the present agreement with the British food ministry has been authorized by order-in-council, the agriculture department announced officially.

An additional bonus of one-half cent a dozen will be paid for oil dipping such eggs, a process which helps retain quality and which now is specially requested by the ministry, the department added.

The department said payment of the bonus was for the purpose of encouraging Canadian egg producers to supply the maximum quantity of the best quality eggs for Britain during the next year.

Existing contracts with the British ministry call for the delivery of 772,000 cases of eggs before May 31 next. Recently the British ministry has requested that this quantity be increased and also that the greatest quantity possible be placed in storage in Canada for shipment by the fall of 1942. The bonus money provided under the order-in-council is sufficient to cover a total of 1,272,000 cases of eggs.

It is hoped that with the incentive the bonus provided that Canadian producers will so organize their poultry efforts that they will be able to provide the quantities of eggs Britain is asking for," said the department.

Less And Less Freedom

French Institutions Being Made To Conform To German Pattern

Step by step the Vichy government, which has more and more become Germany's instrument for holding down prostrate France without the risks involved in a full military occupation, is remodelling French institutions to conform with the Teutonic pattern. It is done by decree. The people are not consulted, have no voice in framing the system that is being imposed upon them. The status of juries is now being "modified" to permit political considerations to govern the disposition of cases brought before the courts. The number of jurors is to be reduced.

They are to be chosen in such manner as to eliminate the independence which hitherto has characterized their verdicts. The verdicts are to be reached "in the presence of the court."

The principle of retroactivity—a weapon the Nazis have found extremely convenient in Germany—has already been admitted by decree into French law for military courts. It has even been extended for these courts may order the confiscation of possessions "present and to come." Government ministers and prefects may direct interment or confiscation without any process of law, whatever in our sense of the term. Liberty, fraternity, equality have ceased for the moment to exist for Frenchmen in their native land.—New York Times.

Hore-Belisha Says Japan Can Carry On For Fifteen Months

R. F. Chisholm, national administrator of wholesale trade, told newspapermen that in all probability the wartime Prices and Trade Board will continue to operate after the war until such time as the fear of any collapse in the Canadian economic structure is passed.

Edgar G. Burton, national administrator of retail trade, supporting this view, declared in any event it was likely the best features of the plan would be retained permanently. Replying to a question, Mr. Burton said representatives from Washington were holding discussions with the Canadian board and studying the situation here closely.

"There is no doubt the United States Government will have to do something along the lines similar to those adopted by Canada," he said.

A 70-year-old monocle-wearing hobo named Sandy J. Ledger, who has crossed the Atlantic 42 times and has held such jobs as a circus peanut vendor and typesetter for the Times of London, has announced his 36 years of globe tramping are over.

He is not a bum, but a hobo. A hobo, he said, is a rover who works—a bum is just a bum. Ledger declared he has always worked in his time he has been a weaver in Massachusetts, a longshoreman in France, a bull puncher on a cattle boat, a compositor on the Times of London, The London Daily Mail, and the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune.

Radioactivity Treatment

May Be Able To Cure Disease By Atom-Smashed Phosphorus

A possible cure for leukemia and other blood stream diseases by means of atom-smashed phosphorus has been suggested by a University of Pennsylvania scientist.

Dr. Eugene Pendergrass demonstrated the treatment before a university group with the aid of a Geiger counter, a device usually utilized only in counting cosmic rays. As he ran the counter over the body of a victim of leukemia, little clicking sounds were registered in the room. According to the scientist, those sounds meant that the device had detected white corpuscle concentrations and was combatting them with radioactivity.

Dr. Pendergrass explained that basis for the treatment, not yet ready for general use, was the breaking down of phosphorus by means of a cyclotron. When bombarded by atoms shot at a very high rate of speed, phosphorus gives off rays similar to radium.

SELECTED RECIPES

CREAMED TURKEY

2 tablespoons butter
2 cups milk
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups diced cold cooked turkey
Melt butter, add flour, blend well. Add milk, mix well, and cook in a double boiler, stirring well. Add turkey. Heat thoroughly. Serve in dressing or potato baskets.

Dressing Rings

2 cups bread crumbs
Salt, pepper and savory
1/4 cup melted butter
1 egg
Mix in order given. Press into buttered small ring molds or one large ring. Bake 15 minutes at 275 degrees F. While hot fill with creamed turkey.

POTATO BASKETS

3 cups hot mashed potatoes
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 tablespoon butter (melted)
2 eggs
3 tablespoons milk
Boil eggs whole. Add other ingredients and stir into potatoes. Shape into baskets. Brown in a hot oven. Fill with creamed turkey.

Leslie Hore-Belisha, former Secretary for War, in a speech at London, said qualified observers believe Japan's stocks of all principal war-making commodities are large enough to support participation in major conflict for 15 months.

Edgar G. Burton, national administrator of retail trade, supporting this view, declared in any event it was likely the best features of the plan would be retained permanently.

Replies to a question, Mr. Burton said representatives from Washington were holding discussions with the Canadian board and studying the situation here closely.

The Individual Citizen's Army

A Weekly Column About This And That In The Canadian Army.

By Alan Maurice Irwin

It's easy enough to figure out for yourself why the Army applies the nickname, "Dusty" to Private Miller or Corporal Rhodes but it is a vastly different matter when you come to Sergeant Clark—or Colonel Clark—or even Lieutenant-General Clark for that matter. All "Clarks" in the Army are called "Nobby" or "Knobby," according to the erudition of the sponsor.

Don't make me why, I don't know. Furthermore, I don't think even Rudyard Kipling knew.

All this looks beside the point. But it isn't. It plays a part in the explanation of the title of this column. You see the general idea of this weekly feature, which will come to you from all sorts of places where Canadians are training to play their part as men, is to tell John Clark all—well, nearly all—about the Canadian Army.

"What do you mean, all about the Army?" asked a Brass Hat with whom I discussed the column. Never mind the rest of the conversation—the answer is in the preceding sentence and that answer is: "What is a Brass Hat?"

A "Brass Hat," paradoxically enough, may not have any brass (gold braid or leaves) on his hat at all. Generally speaking, though, a Brass Hat is a senior officer on the Staff. He may be recognized by coloured "gorged patches" on his lapels and a band of the same colour around his cap which varies according to the branch of the Staff to which he belongs.

One suggestion for a title offered was "Your Army." True enough it is your army and it's my army—and sometimes we don't realize our ownership and responsibility as much as we should. But one or two publishers thought that sounded too reminiscent of "My Day." So it followed several other suggestions into the discard.

Then a few nights ago, together with a dozen and a half other shivering reporters and cameramen, the Adjutant-General, the Chief of the Air Staff, some Air Force Officers, and ground-crews who have to brave the weather regardless of rain and sleet, I watched a transport aircraft descend in the darkness at Ottawa. Out of the plane stepped Defence Minister Ralston, back from England. I remembered the legend that, even on a 45-minute flight Colonel Ralston sits right down at a desk and works from start to finish of the trip.

What he must have been working on this time would be, obviously, a speech to be made in the House of Commons, the opening of which he had missed, by the way, because of bad weather encountered on his crossing from England. Forgetting new columns and their vexatious titles I decided I would go to the "House" when, as the Press Gallery men put it, "Ralston is up" and listen to the kind of speech that is prepared on a plane.

I did. So, I noticed, did a number of members who had been absent from the chamber until Col. Ralston started to speak. What he said covered many columns in the daily papers. That is what he said to you. But what he said to me was contained in one paragraph of Hansard—he gave me a title for this column. Here is the quotation which followed a reference to the work of civilian recruiting committees. Their work, he said, would "bring to all our citizens a keener appreciation of the fact that the army is the individual citizen's army, and not an outside organization of which they know nothing and care less."

That was the title—"The Individual Citizen's Army," and here, except for one more brief note, is your first column.

The brief note? Another paradox. All "Browns" in the Army are nicknamed "Buster"—except, and this must prove the rule, Major-General E. W. Browne, D.S.O. M.C. Adjutant-General whose nickname is "Sam."

Always Standing By

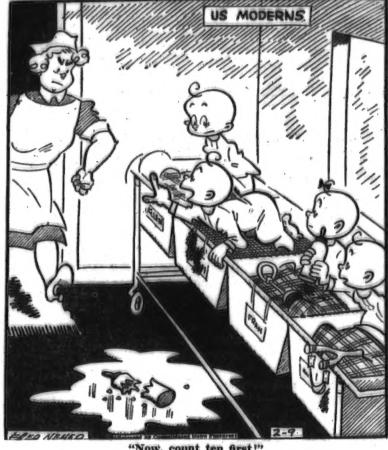

One of the ways in which munition workers are pepped up in the Motherland is instanced in the following dispatch from Glasgow:

"Give us the bombs and we will drop them," two bomber pilots told workers at a shell and bomb filling factory in northwest England. "We are always standing by on call and only too pleased to go."

The lungs of the average man contain about five quarts of air, and you can estimate for yourself how much of it is hot.

Canada's Forest Area

Occupies About 35 Per Cent. Of Country's Total Land Area

Canada's total forested area now exceeds 120,000 square miles and occupies 35 per cent. of the country's land area, the Dominion Forest Service announced recently.

"About 450,000 square miles are not suitable for commercial forests," the report said, "but on 770,000 square miles the trees are large enough for use now or can be expected to grow to usable size in future."

The service explained that because of Canada's great size, and the concentration of her population in the southern parts, large areas of forests of commercial quality are too far removed from centres of consumption to be economically operated.

The portion of productive forest now accessible totals about 430,000 square miles of which about 45 per cent. is merchantable timber and 35 per cent. is occupied by young growths.

Japs Would Get Warlike Reception In Interior Of Sarawak

The Rance of Sarawak, wife of Sir Charles Vyner Brooke who rules the country, says the oil wells at Miri, Sarawak, were blown up recently when Japanese invaders appeared to be after them.

The Rance, who was in New York, said: "Everything the Japs want has been destroyed. They must need oil badly, because there is nothing else in Sarawak that they could use. To effect a landing they must have used suicide squads or parachute troops."

Saying it was virtually impossible to defend Miri except by sea, she added that should Japanese penetrate the interior, Sarawak's headhunters could handle them.

ANNE TEDLOCK BROOKS

CHAPTER II.

Dick Sheridan's complacency was shattered abruptly.

He stared at his friend, Ransome Todd, his brown eyes assuming the boring look that was famous in the court room for ferreting the secrets out of lying witnesses.

"Of course, you mean the contract I drew up last night for Randolph and Major Towne. Why?"

In the next few minutes Ransome Todd explained the situation that Dick Sheridan already knew too well.

"There's just one thing wrong with your suggestion, and that is I happen to draw up contracts that can't be broken. I take a lot of pride in that, my friend!"

"I'd like to punch your nose for tone of voice, Dick!" Ransome's own took on his gentlest, most persuasive shading. "You don't want to see Tam cheated out of her heritage, do you? As true Southern gentlemen, I vote we come to the aid of the lady in distress."

Todd looked the young attorney squarely in the eye. He could give him stare for stare. They hadn't shared room at Emory for nothing. Each knew the other would give no quarter, unless he chose to do so.

"As a matter of fact, I was just trying to think of a way out of it when you came in."

"Yes, I can see that you were. Like Uncle Jobias, when you sit down to think of your troubles, you 'emphatically fails asleep'!"

Dick grimmed. "This Georgia sun's enough to put any one to sleep. Look out there!"

Ransome crossed to the window obligingly. Along the square on the old green wooden benches, sat a score or so of men. With one accord they nodded their heads in the shade of the giant trees. In the heat now and then, a horse tied to the racks whinnied out in the stillness. A clapping team pulled a cracking wagon along the street, the driver asleep in the sun, and the load of white cotton barely staying within it.

Todd struck his fist on the mahogany desk. Dick stared at him as the desk shook and the bottle of ink bounced in its container.

"I tell you the whole damned place and all of its people are asleep!" Todd crossed the room in giant strides.

Dick burst out laughing. "Honestly, I'd think you were playing the part of an ambitious young Senator if I didn't know you better."

Todd sat down suddenly in the consulting chair. "Have a seat, Sheridan."

"Thanks," Dick grinned. "Nice touch of hospitality there, Old Pal."

"Cut it, Dick. Wipe that grin off your face and let's get down to business. Trouble with Tahlahna is that we have all the rest of our lives to accomplish things, and there's never any hurry. Therefore, we never get anything done."

Dick Sheridan could not forbear one more good natured jibe. "I hear that's the reason the bank is going under. All of the executives sleep at their posts."

The young banker rose to his feet, and Dick had the impression of a fleeting remembrance of Ranny with that expression on his face, when he smashed through the line of scrimmages for dear old Emory and made a broken field run of 90 yards for a touchdown.

"Okey, Ran, let's hear your suggestions. Of course I don't know much about banking, but if I thought I could help you out of a tough spot, I'd be glad to offer you my services."

"I don't know anything about law. Dick, I grant you that. But you're a smart lawyer, and you know it. Break that contract somehow, and write in a clause giving the Randolphs a percentage of the yield."

Ranny got up and took another vicious round of the room. "That mother lode in the Cricked Hill—hell! Dick, there's a fortune there, as much as $50,000,000 or more—no telling how much more! And you let it slip through an outsider—a New Yorker, at that!"

Dick restrained the laughter that leaped to his lips at the scornful contempt of his friend's voice. He laid a restraining hand on Todd's arm. "All right, Ran, I just wanted to see how far you'd go."

"You will fix it up, then, Dick? Don't you? I knew I could count on you!"

"I can't break the contract," Todd's face fell ludicrously. "But—" Dick went on hastily, "I do know there's one way out of it. There happens to be one little formality that throws a different light on the whole thing." He leaned forward.

"And that?" Todd caught at the straw like a drowning man.

"The mere fact that the contract has been signed by neither party."

"I've got a notion to beat the hell out of you for not saying so in the first place." Todd jumped to his feet, then his face broke into a pleased smile. He clapped Dick on the back. A clap that made Sheridan wince.

"Sorry, I have an appointment in exactly 10 minutes. I'll have to work like the deuce to get that contract out of my hands."

"You mean—"

"I mean that the Major, his engineer, and Knox Randolph are due here." He rang the bell and the girl who served as his secretary entered the office. "Bring me that new set of contracts, Miss Sue," he said.

Ransome turned to the door. "Call me and tell me how it comes out, will you? And we'll celebrate tonight." "Okey. Let's get the girls and drive out to the Rostan."

"We'll see," Ran thought; Tam will not go. I guess I could ask Selby, Dick's sister. He glanced back at his friend. But Dick was already thumbing through his papers.

Ranny went from the room, but waited for a long moment outside the office door. One thing bothered him: and that was the sense of honor that was possessed by men like Knox Randolph. He had given his word to the Major that he would lease the land to him. Now just because the assayer had found out the richness of the ore that was taken out in such vast quantities, how could he ask for a new contract?

Well, that was Sheridan's worry. Let him attend to that little item.

The important thing was to get him to see the injustice of the original plan.

Ransome took out his large white handkerchief and mopped his wide forehead. His hand touched the cheek that Tam had slapped and he winced. It was not the first time that Tam had slapped him, but somehow this was different. This last slapping was not over an argument as to who had caught the most crawdads out of the Chestnuts, or who had last played the part of De Soto, the Spaniard.

Ransome went down to his office, avoiding his father's inquiring look as he passed his desk. He sat down and drew some papers toward him.

Ranny sat looking at Miss Crane, not seeing her, but in her place: a black-haired girl, with red lips and gentian colored eyes; a dimpled chin...

"Is—is anything er—wrong?" Miss Crane asked anxiously, laying her pencil in her lap, and smoothing back her faded hair.

"Yes, of course!" Ran said. "Oh, excuse me Miss Edie, of course not! I'm sorry."

Miss Crane thought! I've never seen him look like that at me before. Why, he didn't even see me! I'll bet that Ransome Todd's in love!

The telephone jangled sharply, and Ranny jumped for it, almost snatching it from Miss Crane's extended hand. "Yes?" shouted.

Miss Crane jumped. She eyed Ranny's scowling face curiously. The Todds were among the most gentle men of her acquaintance; in fact, she would almost go as far as to say the world.

"You white-livered chicken thief, get on with your story, and you'd better make it a good one."

Miss Crane stared as Ransome continued: "Wish I'd smashed your nose while I was in your office, Dick. Stop baiting me and tell me if you touch down."

Miss Edie's hand crept up to her mouth, and she took a vicious bite out of a finger nail. She had a suddenly frightened look on her drab face, and looked anxiously over to the door, as if she wanted to scuttle through it.

"Good boy! I'll bet the major had a stroke." Ransome's face broke into a boyish grin. "That's swell. I know I could count on you. Remember our plans for the evening. Guess I'll call your sister, Selby."

Miss Edie was smiling, too, now. All's right with Ranny's world. His voice froze her once more. "You what? Already made the arrangements with her? And say that last again?" he demanded, incredulously.

"With Tam?"

Miss Edie got up determinedly, and measured the distance toward the outer door with her small gray eyes. "So you're taking Tam, are you?" he shouted. "That's O.K. Bud; but I'm telling you now, Tam's my girl!"

Deliberate Planning

Japan, Like Germany, Out To Conquer The World

Let nobody think that Japan's attack upon Britain and the United States was any sudden inspiration.

A Washington writer for the Overseas News Agency recalls that as far back as 1927 one General Tanaka, then premier of Japan, presented to the Emperor a document which became known as the Tanaka Memoir. Somehow the text leaked out, and although Tokyo claimed hotly that it was a fake it seems to have been genuine. "In order," wrote Tanaka, "to conquer the entire world the conquest of China is a prerequisite. If we want to control China we must first defeat the United States of America as we have smashed Russia. We have to fight America now or later."

Five years later another Japanese sabre-rattler, a general named Asaki, said this: "Our country intends to enforce her national ideal through the seven seas of the globe. We must do it by war if necessary. We are the descendants of God and should rule the world."

These are not isolated specimens of Japanese eloquence—many others, and more recently, could be cited.

We should be making a mistake, therefore, if we assumed that Japan is the misguided victim of German intrigue. Japan is in the war because she wants to be in it. It is her deliberate and cold-blooded choice—Ottawa Journal.

Trees For Farmers

Approximately 8,000,000 seedlings and cuttings of various deciduous trees and 388,000 evergreens are in winter storage at the two Dominion Forest Nursery Stations at Indian Head and Sutherland, Sask., ready for distribution for planting on Western farms in the spring.

Escaping To Britain

Swedish newspaper despatches have reported increasing numbers of Norwegians were fleeing their German-occupied homeland, slipping away to Britain in some instances by the boatload.

Automobile tires cost from $75 to $90 and were supposed to be good for 2,500 miles, 31 years ago.

Paper Shortage

People In Britain Have To Supply Paper For Goods Wrapped In Stores

Inquiries at one or two representative stores revealed that shopkeepers are not worried by the provision in the new Paper Order that paper may not be used for wrapping goods other than foodstuffs.

The regulation seems, indeed to be welcomed, for the reason that it imposes on the public an authoritative reminder of economies which have long been necessary.

Most shops, for some time, have not been able to use paper for wrapping articles already packed in containers, or unlikely to be damaged by being passed straight from the counter to the shopping basket. In suburban districts many shops are already in the habit of displaying notices requiring customers to bring their own paper, or even, in the case of butchers and fishmongers, their own plates or basins in which to carry purchases away.

The government will ask the House of Commons for another £1,000,000 credit for war expenditures. This credit would make a total of £4,000,000,000 for the war during the fiscal year which began April 1.

Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons that Britain had spent £8,300,000,000 ($37,000,000,000) to fight the war so far.

The government will ask the House of Commons for another £1,000,000 credit for war expenditures. This credit would make a total of £4,000,000,000 for the war during the fiscal year which began April 1.

The new credit disclosed that Britain recently had been spending at the rate of about £83,000,000 a week.

He indicated that a total of £4,000,000,000 in credits for the current year would include approximately £300,000,000 to be spent in the United States before March 31 for supplies not covered by the lend-lease program.

Might Be His Turn

Bret Harte Felt His Headache Could Be Fateful

Bret Harte was scheduled to deliver a lecture in Richmond, Virginia. Upon arriving in the city he had a terrible headache which almost blindfolded him with pain. Feeling that a bit of fresh air would do him good he went out for a stroll with the chairman of the evening. The latter, a proud native of Richmond, talked long and hard about the wonders of the city. Harte, occupied with his own troubles, paid scant attention to him. "Richmond," boasted his companion, "is one of the healthiest cities in America. Our death rate averages only one person a day." At this Harte slowed his walk perceptibly. "Tell me," moaned his host, holding his throbbing head in his hands, "has to-day's man died yet?"

GEMS OF THOUGHT

CULTIVATION

The highest purpose of intellectual cultivation is, to give a man a perfect knowledge and mastery of his own inner self.—Novalis.

Culture would not be culture if it were not an acquired taste.—John Cowper Powys.

That is true cultivation which gives us sympathy with every form of human life, and enables us to work most successfully for its advancement.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Nurseries of character should be strongly garrisoned with virtue. School-examinations are one-sided; it is not so much academic education, as a moral and spiritual culture, which lifts one higher.—Mary Baker Eddy.

That alone can be called true refinement which elevates the soul of man, purifying the manners by improving the intellect.—Coleridge.

The primary indication, to my thinking of a well-ordered mind is a man's ability to remain in one place and linger in his own company.—Seneca.

Stock Seed Potatoes

Among the methods of maintaining the stock seed of potatoes, mass selection of the tubers from the bins in the storage cellar, or from the field rows at digging time, is not recommended by expert growers, because too much is left to chance when the particular parent plants from which the tubers were selected are not known.

In a single week the Department of Munitions and Supply placed orders for 2,000,000 caps for the armed forces.

CAN GROW THESE PLANTS

Decoration For All The House

You'd love to decorate your home with plants, but you haven't time to take care of them? Many beautiful plants take care of themselves. In almost any spot, one or another will thrive.

Sprays of Chinese evergreen and philodendron grow in a low water-filled bowl, make a lovely centre for your table. Just rinse the bowl and add fresh water once a week.

Dracaena, tall, with variegated foliage, does well even where there's little direct sunlight near a fire. It's a good stay-away landing. So does sansevieria, which grows for months without drainage.

Flowering plants, of course, require more attention, but are not too exacting. The aspasia will put forth many flowers if given enough water. Jerusalem cherry, so colorful with its gray red fruit, asks only sunlight and protection from drafts and gas. It's easy to brighten your room with plants. Order 25¢ postpaid booklet describes simple care of many lovely foliage and flowering house plants, including azalea, flowering maple, cyclamen. Tells how to grow vines.

Used Them Both

Candidates For Legislature Had Same Idea To Get Votes

The race for the legislature had been very heated, and now that the two candidates had entered the home stretch, they were practically exhausted. However, one of them, anxious to glean every possible vote, was making a last round of doubtful persons on his list. At one farm house, his watchful eyes came to rest upon a considerable supply of wood that needed sawing. Immediately, he peeled off his coat, informing the housewife, "I'm always looking for work, whether I'm in the legislature or about the house." Finally he finished his laborious task. It was then that the housewife said with a disarming smile: "I declare, it's hard to decide which to vote for—you or Mr. Smithers. Why, right now he's out on the back porch churning."

Tests Standards

English Woman Does Accurate Work With Munitions Gauges

Precision is her forte and so Mrs. Constantine E. Arreger has been called in to aid the Canadian war effort. A meteorologist in the physics division of the National Research Council Laboratories, Mrs. Arreger is a British mother who left England with her three children, John, 12; Marion, 11, and Susan, 7, in July, 1940. She has a M.Sc. degree from the University of Liverpool, England, and was awarded the Sir Oliver Lodge Fellowship for research work in magneto-optics. Now in the Metrology "lab" of the National Research Council, this tall, fair-haired woman tests down to millions of an inch. She works on standards of time, length and weight in munitions gauges.

UNUSUAL BANKING IN THESE UNUSUAL TIMES

As Canada's war efforts gain length of stride and speed of step, business in general reflects added activity and increases in volume. As business increases, banking activity also increases. Our service keeps pace with the requirements of our customers, albeit occasionally they may experience slight delays, owing to war-time depletion of our staff. (More than six hundred members of our staff are already in the Empire's forces.)

By experience, increased effort and up-to-date equipment, we endeavour to compensate for reduced numbers, to avoid delays and inconvenience to our customers, and to conduct all banking transactions, however unusual, with everyday efficiency.

Hockey Notes

The postponed hockey game between the Irma and Holden juniors was played in Irma last Monday evening with the result that Holden received the long end of the score, 7-2. Holden scored two goals early in the game and then Irma tied it up. From then on the Holden goalie stopped all shots coming his way while his teammates added five goals to their credit. The Irma team is planning to pay a return visit to Holden next Saturday evening.

The Irma Pee Wee hockey team met the Albert team again on Saturday, January 3rd, for the second time. This game was much closer than the previous one. The score stood one all for some time, Jack King getting credit for the Irma goal, when Ernie Carter got in close and bagged the winning goal.

MRS. W. J. JONES DIED IN CALIFORNIA, JANUARY 4th

(From the Viking News)

Even Jones received the sad news that his mother, Mrs. W. J. Jones, passed away at Long Beach, California, on Sunday, January 4. She was a visitor here last September when she was taken ill and removed to the home of her son, S. W. Jones, at High River, later going to her home at Long Beach. She did not fully recover and passed peacefully away on January 4. The late Mrs. Jones was one of the early pioneer women of this district and took an active part in the social life of the community until removing to California about twenty years ago.

She is mourned by her husband and three sons, Evan of Viking, Stephen of High River, and Percy of Irma; two daughters, Anne and Nelle of California, and one sister.
